AAU engineers attends the Global Grad Show

The Students' from College of Engineering at Al Ain University of Science and Technology, Abu Dhabi campus, visited the Global Grad Show in order to inspire them with what the future looks like and getting a first look at 150 of the inventions. The show has an optimistic look at what is in store for the next generations. Students were presented too many projects in different fields such as hardware, software, and civil engineering. They had a closer view to solutions ranging from the physical to the virtual, high tech and complex to small and conceptually simple. For example, a technology allows blind people and visually impaired users to sense when objects are in or near their path and much more.

This visit came from the keenness of the university to keep students updated with the latest designs and projects, and to configure new ideas on their minds.
